The hand position here is similar to the injection of viscoelastic. Depending on the type of lens being inserted, a pushing or twisting action will be required of the right hand; this can involve significant force at times. Having the left hand firmly anchored again helps to stabilize.