Figure 13-15. (continued) (G) Blades are introduced around the insertion. (H) While visualizing the suture at all times, the insertion is completely removed from the globe. (I) The insertion site is marked with an arrow. The end of the muscle is securely held by the suture. (J) An operative photo showing equivalent stage is shown here.

Figure 13-16. One end of the caliper is snugged up against the insertion and the other end gently pressed against the sclera to create the mark.